The London School Group includes The London School of English, The London School of International Communication and London School Online.

The London School of English is the world's longest-established accredited English language school. Founded in 1912, we have unrivalled experience. We are small enough to provide a personal service, but large enough to have excellent trainers, facilities and resources. We offer a variety of practical, highly effective business, professional and general courses at our three schools in the United Kingdom: two in London and one in Canterbury.

The Swedish branch of the London School of English has been running and co-ordinating our operations in the Nordic region for over 30 years. We offer a full range of tailor-made and customised courses, and focus primarily on English for professional communication, including effective writing for business, meetings and negotiations skills and continuous language coaching for both the public sector and private sector companies of all sizes. We also offer translation and editing services, distance support and other language consultancy skills.

The London School of International Communication has three key focus areas: International Communication (including international presentation and negotiation skills); International Leadership (including leading virtual teams and managing across borders); and Intercultural Skills.

London School Online offers tailored courses designed for and adapted to the needs and goals of specific clients and sectors. These are often designed in collaboration with the client and can be branded with the client's own name and logotype. London School Online also offers a range of off-the-shelf online courses in General and Business English, as well as for specialist areas such as Legal English.
